Boy choir comes to Atlanta on high note

By Derrick Henry
Staff Writer

Boys have been singing in churches for ages. A major function of the Schola Cantorum, the papal choir and singing school founded in early medieval times, was the training of boys.

Some of these youths became highly skilled. In Milan, Italy, boys were often entrusted with the more difficult chants for the simple reason they had spent more time rehearsing them and were therefore better prepared. The voice of the young Orlando de Lasso (1532-1594) was so prized that he was kidnapped three times.

The sound of boys singing in tandem has a special purity and penetration, a delicious innocence that is enormously appealing. Who has not heard of the Vienna Choir Boys, among whose ranks have sung such notables as Haydn and Schubert. Atlanta has a notable boy choir of its own, some 200 voices strong and 28 years old, just returned from a three-week tour of Italy, Austria, Germany and Yugoslavia.

One place they did not go was France. But Atlantans were treated Sunday night to an a cappella concert by Les Petits Chanteurs a La Croix Potencee, a boy choir from Toulouse, a sister city of Atlanta. Under the direction of Michel Riviere des Borderies, the touring group consists of 31 members. Approximately three-quarters of these range in age from 8 to 13. The remainder of the group consists not of boys at all, but young adults ages 18-23.

The latter provide the tenor and bass range. Without them the musical scope would be limited. Saturday's concert, which took place in All Saints Episcopal Church, encompassed some 20 selections, all of them short The first half of the program was sacred, the second half secular. This was reflected in the dress: white robes followed by blue suits with knee breeches.

The Petits Chanteurs is a good group. Their basic sound is full and forceful, capable of wide dynamics. The blend is pleasing and well-balanced, less treble-oriented than comparable Anglican aggregations. And the musicianship is high.

There were some oddities Saturday. It's the first time I've ever heard the American national anthem sung in church. It's the first time I've ever heard the national anthem with such a distinctly French flavor ("ze bombs bursting in air"). And I can't ever recall hearing four Christmas carols at a July concert.

Save for "Jingle Bells," the evening's most upbeat number and sole encore, tempos were uniformly slow. Tiresomely so, eventually. Renaissance works by Palestrina and Victoria were dragged out excessively.

During the second half of the program, the boys visibly — and audibly — began tiring. Timbre grew increasingly nasal, pitches increasingly out of tune, ensemble increasingly unsettled. This is understandable, because the choir had sung in Charlotte, N.C., just the day before. The group, founded in 1936, is engaged in a rather arduous tour of the eastern United States and Canada lasting from July 8-Aug. 2 with only three days off.

The two soloists, a youthful alto and an older soprano, possessed lovely voices, with the kind of mellifluous pungency unique to boys. But I wondered why the solos weren't spread out a bit — these two youngsters were entrusted with an enormous amount of work.

Even so, it was an entertaining concert. And according to the program, "there's no better ambassador for Toulouse and France than a singing boy."

Madonna's nude pictures may increase teenage pornography, expert claims

By Russ Kazal
United Press International

An expert on child pornography says publication of nude pictures of Madonna in Playboy and Penthouse magazines will be construed by teen fans of the pop idol to mean posing in the nude is harmless and appropriate behavior.

Newsstands nationwide are ordering extra copies of the magazines to meet unusually heavy demand — some of which is coming from teenage boys and girls who are fans of the 26-year-old pop star.

The magazines each moved up their production dates to be the first to hit the newsstands with the pictures of Madonna, and issues of both already have been distributed to some cities around the country.

"We must have had 50 more people come in today than the days before. It keeps growing each day," said Ted Marnell, supervisor at Out of Town News in Cambridge, Mass.

"We had a guy in here yesterday, he was probably 50. I don't think he knew who Madonna was, but his grandson asked him to get him a Madonna Penthouse."

Madonna has patterned her image after '60s sex goddess Marilyn Monroe and her trademark attire of black lace, exposed navel and fingerless gloves has triggered a fashion craze among teen girls.

The bulk of the pictures being published were taken about six years ago, well before Madonna's singing career took off, when she posed for art classes in New York. Many of the photos were sold to the magazines by students or instructors of the classes.

Judith Reisman, an investigator conducting a study for the Department of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention, said the pictures could encourage child pornography.

"You're dealing with an idol or heroine," said Ms. Reisman, who studies pornography, sexual abuse and exploitation of children. "She carries with her a great deal of power, a great deal of symbolism.
